Women's Work at Ditchling Museum of Art + Craft

Until 13 October 2019

The interwar period saw a significant increase in women turning their craft into desirable and important works of art. These enterprising women created successful business using their skills in a variety of fields including textiles, silver, weaving and ceramics. Often overshadowed by their male counterparts, these skilled artists are being showed in a major new exhibition, Women's Work, at the Ditchling Museum of Art + Craft.

Featuring more than 100 pieces, Women's Work focuses on a core group of makers, Ethel Mairet, Alice Hindson, Phyllis Barron & Dorothy Larcher, Enid Marx, Catherine 'Casty' Cobb, Katharine Pleydell-Bouverie, Denise Wren and Elizabeth Peacock. Although some are relatively unknown, all are hugely significant to the development of the Arts & Crafts movement.
